Tents and Portable Cottages Enough for a Hundred will be Up by Wednesday-Sev. onty-four Cases in All Now-The Massilla's Ben Italians Sentiered all Over the Country -Pour of Them Down with the Disease at Newburgh-The Nevada's Hebrew Pas-Sengera Detained at Hoffman Island,

Five more cases of typhus fever were found pesterday afternoon, nearly twenty-four hours after the last case previously reported. Two of the victims were Jacob Hoffman, a boy of 6, and Rebecca Leboff, 35 years old. The woman was nursing a ten-months-old baby, and the inspector allowed her to take it with her to the hospital. The woman and the boy had been ught to the quarantined lodging house at

The inspector had been to the house half a dozen times after that and had seen them, but they had not complained of feeling ill, nor had they shown any of the visible symptoms of typhus. It was near 4 o'clock vesterday after noon when he called for the seventh time, and then he found them feverish and suffering. The disease had developed, or, rather, had manifested itself with surprising suddenness.

These patients were conveyed to the recep-tion hospital at the foot of East Sixteenth street. The Health Department had announced only a few hours before that there was still for ten patients in the typhus pavillon on North Brother Island. There must have been a mistake somewhere, for at the reception hospital the ambulance driver was informed that the patients would have to remain there over night with four of the patients from Ellis Island who were still there, as there was no room for any more on the island.

The woman and the boy were taken to one of the wards and bathed in cold water. Their temperature was high and they were very towerish. Bremide and digitalis were administered, the former to soothe the nerves and aliay the dizzy headache from which both ware suffering, and the latter to sundue and regulate the action of the heart, which in both patients was benting violently. Then, after a good dose of whiskey and some foot, they were put to oed in actean, well-ventilated room, and soon fell askep. The chances are that when they awake they will be worse, for that is the course the disease usually takes.

The three other cases were found in the lodging house 42 East Twelfth street late last night. The patients are members of the Weinstein family, and their mother is already at North Brother Island. Their names are Hirsch, aged 10; Joseph, aged 2, and Scholen, aged 8. They were sent to the liceoption Hospital. Just before they arrived the six other patients in the hospital were sent to North Brother Island.

Fifty-eight cases were found on Thursday, eleven on Friday, and these five yesterday, making a total of 74. It is a peculiarity of typhus that at its worst stage the patient traches a state if delirium in which he imagines that he is perfectly well. Most of these flussian Hobrews do not believe they are sick. They look upon the physician and the nurses as their enemies.

Pregident Wilson of the Board of Health, The woman and the boy were taken to one dassilia, but said they hadn't heard anything of the typhus plague.

"On the ship," Mrs. Marchesi said, "the Balians were in the front and the Jews in the back, and we did not see anything of the Jews during the whole voyage. They ate and slept entirely apart from us."

Dr. Edson received telegrams from the Health Commissioners of Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Cincinnati, asking for the names and addresses of the Italians who had come on the Massilia and gone to those cities. He could not give the addresses, but he sent the names. Where he learned the addresses of those who were still in New York he sent men to disinfect the houses and keep the inmates under observation. HEBREWS DETAINED ON HOPPMAN ISLAND.

The Guion line steamship Nevada, Capt. Parks, from Liverpool, arrived yesterday with thirty-two Russian Hebrews and sixty-dwebcandinavians in the steerage. Health Officer Jenkins immediately telegraphed to Underhill & Co., the agents of the line:

Rend transfer boat at once to transfer thirty Russian Hobrews from Nevada to Holiman Island for in-spection There was not the slightest suspicion in Dr.

There was not the slightest suspicion in Dr. Jenkins's mind that any of these people had typhus, but as they all came from the faminestricken districts of Hussia he did not want to take any chances. The Scantinavians were allowed to land.

Dr. Edson said yesterday afternoon:
"As the situation is at present, all the Hebrews who are under observation are either at D Essex street or 42 East Twelfth street. We are keeping the longing house at 100 Clinton place in reserve. The public need feel no foar for the present. We believe that we have the disease under control, but it will take at least twenty-one days from the discovery of the last case to make sare that it will not break out again. That is the period of incubation, and when it has passed without developing the disease, there is no further danger. As yet there has been no death from typhus, but the disease has in no case reached the stage where death usually occurs. That comes between the sixth and the tenth day of its development, while the cases that we have in hand are none of them more than four days old."

HOW THE INSPECTORS AVOID THE DISEASE. On the subject of the liability of the Health inspectors to contract the disease, Dr. Edson inspectors to contract the disease, Dr. Edson said:

"The inspectors run just as much risk as any other person who comes in contact with a typhus patient. There is hardly any way of guarding against it except by keeping clean and breathing fresh air. The inspector always keeps his hat and overcoat on when be enters the sick room. He tries to get into a draught, if there is one where the air will move toward the patient and not from him-get to the windward of the patient, as the sailors would say. He does not stop more than five or ten minutes, and when he comes out he takes a long walk in the open air before returning to the office. In such a short time you can see there is very little danger of contagion. We have lost only three or four inspectors from typhus since the department was organized."

BO LACK OF VOLUNTEERS.

Should the disease spread, there will be no lack of physicians and surgeous to volunteer their services. Dr. Edson and President Wilson have already received applications from many quarters for appointments in case of need. Here are some specimen letters:

FOUR CASES AT NEWBURGH. NewBurgh. Feb. 13.—There are four cases of typhus fever here. All the patients are Italians, and all were passengers on the Massilia. When they came here they went to 233 Washington street, which is in the midst of an Italian colony.

The almahouse physician discovered the four cases this morning. The patients were at once removed to the pesthouse, where they are under the care of the city health officer and the almshouse physician. The discovery of the disease caused siarm in the neighborhood of the infected house. The building will be thoroughly disinfected and cleaned.

BALTIMORS, Fob. 13.—Max Rosenthal, the missing passenger of the Massilia, is quartered here at 10 North Bond street. Health Commissioner McShane, who was notified by the New York Health authorities to keep an eye on him, visited Rosenthal to-day, and after examination pronounced him free from disease. Rosenthal will be watched, however. He nursed the fever-stricken passengers on the Massilia.

HOW WORLDS ARE MADE.

Lecture by Carrett P. Servins in the Cooper Union Prec Course.

Mr. Garrett P. Serviss, Fresident of the astronomical department of the Brooklyn Institute, was the lecturer last evening in the Cooper Union free course. Mr. Serviss faced an appreciative audience of perhaps 2.000 persons. His lecture, "How Worlds Are Made," was illustrated upon a large canvas by means of the stereopticon.

"This earth upon which we stand," said
Mr. Serviss, "is as much the subject of growth as a plant or a tree. According to the nebular theory, as expounded by La Place, the original condition of things was nebulous or cloud-like. How did the earth, starting in a cloudlike condition, develop into what it now is? Suppose a puff of steam to be removed from all outside influences. We might not at first be able to see it because of its intense heat. As heat leaks away from it. it becomes smaller and more dense, until it becomes a drop of water. Heat must still leak away, for the drop of water will be hot as compared with the cold of space. As it grows away, for the drop of water will be hot as compared with the cold of space. As it grows cold and the fressing point is reached, it becomes a particle of ice—the puff of steam has assumed a solid form. By the same process, heat leaked away until our globe reached its present condition."

The first picture thrown upon the screen represented the ideal solar nebula. The lecturer explained how the nebulous rings from which worlds are developed were separated off from a revolving nebula just as water files from a grindstone when it is rapidly turned. As the nebula whirts about these rings are left pehind and dense spots appear here and there in their circumference, and at longth, as the heat leaks away, these denser parts, having attracted to themselves all the substance of the rings, become spherical bodies turning about the central body of the system. Beginning with the nebula, Mr. Serviss took the sun and stars as the second step in creation, and showed how different stars represent different stares of development. Jupiter represented the intermediate stage between a sun and an incrusted planet, and then came the earth with its cool surface. Going another step further, we have bodies like the moon whose atmosphere and water have disappeared, probably beneath its surface. Then came the question whether there can be any further change—whether a worn-out body like the moon can come back to life—whether there is some process by which it may renew its heat.

"Heat," said Mr. Serviss, "could be restered through a collision, and the nepearance of new stars shows that collisions have taken place. Such a collision could reduce a body to the nebulous state, and then it would be possible for the work of development to proceed as before."

The value of astronomical photography was explained, and pictures were thrown upon the

A MISLATO LETTER.

Mr. Herbst Wrote It Before Re Disap-peared, and It Has Just Turned Up.

Mrs. Annie Herbst of 270 Boerum street, Williamsburgh, is now for a second time seeking the whereabouts of her husband, George Herost. He disappeared in July, 1880. She is a daughter of a well-to-do blacksmith of Williamsburgh. She was married only three weeks before her husband disappeared.

Mrs. Herbst began a soarch for her husband, but was unable to obtain any clue to his whereahouts. For two years she mourned him as dead.

While searching through his papers a tew weeks ago, she found a farewell letter which he had evidently written before he went away. The letter fold her to be of good cheer and not to worry abut him, as he was sorry he had to take the step he was about to take.

He added that he would be "happy in another place." Mrs. Herbst received information a few days ago that her husband was probably alive and well in a Western town. She began to insert personals in the newspapers and is hoping to hear whether he is alive or dead.

Bland Says It's a Threat to the Silver Men. WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.-Mr. Bland, Chalrman of the House Committee on Coinage. Weights. and Measures, said to a United Press reporter to-night: "The proposition to list gold bullion on the New York Stock Exchange is in the nature of a threat to the silver men. It is of a threat to the silver men. It is in the line of endeavoring to terrorize Congress, but people nowadays are not so easily frightened. They recognize the same influences that have been fighting silver legislation for years past. Even if gold bullion is listed it will not defeat the silver legislation."

The prediction that if the Bland silver bill passed the Bouse gold would go up to 130, Mr. Bland did not consider as an argument against its passage, but rather one in favor of it. for, said he, "If gold is going to be so high. neople can't get it, and as they must have money they can then get silver." Mr. Bland was certain his bill would pass the House, but would not express an opinion as to its fate in the Senate.

CLEVELAND OUT OF THE WAY

ALL PRECEDENTS OF THE PARTY AGAINST HIS NOMINATION.

Ex.Senator Joseph E. Brown of Georgie Explains Why His Candidacy Should Not Be Considered... Senator Hill Bead and Shoulders Above Any Other Aspirant. ATLANTA, Feb. 13.-Joseph E. Brown, four times Governor of Georgia, twice United States Senator, and the strongest man politically in the State, has written the following communication on the Presidential situation to the Atlanta Constitution:
"Editor of the Constitution: I regret to see the unfortunate division among Democrats which seems to be springing up in reference to the choice to be made by the National Democratic Convention of a candidate for a President. The disagreement, which seems in some cases to be a little bitter. has sprung up between the friends of ex-President Cleveland and Senator Hill of New York as rival candidates for the nomination. I am a personal friend of both the gentlemen named, and no Democrat has a higher appreciation of the valuable ser-vices rendered by each to his country and the Democratic party than I have. Entertaining this opinion of the contestants, anything like an angry division in the Democratic party in reference to their relative merits and claims seems to be most unfortunate.

"The Democratic party has victory within its grasp in the next election if it makes no unpardonable mistake, but to make victory certain it is necessary that we have a united Democracy. The two wings of the party should be ready to make concessions each to the other if the general good of the party and the country required it. It seems to me that one of the essential rules to be adopted by the Democracy should be to select candidates who are able and worthy, who have the confidence of the people, and who are Democrats whose records are faultless as far as party fealty is concerned: but as success is very important another very essential thing is to have reference to availability.

"While we hope for Democratic gains in several of the Northwestern States and possibly in one or two of the New England States, I fear we cannot count with much certainty on carrying any of these Republican States. To make certain of election it will be necessary. therefore, for us to nominate a candidate who can carry all the Southern Democratic States, and who can carry New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Indiana. This makes victory certain, and without it we have uncertainty. Now, it seems to me that one of the first things to be carefully looked posed is: Can be carry the doubtful States just mentioned? President Cleveland carried them in 1884 and was elected. He lost them in 1888 and was defeated. Now, entertaining these views, it seems to me that we should take the earliest steps possible to ascertain what is the sentiment of the States just mentioned.

nor do I at present remember any case where either of the political parties of the United States has nominated as the candidate of the party a man who has served a second term in the Presidential chair, or who has served one term and been nominated for reselection and defeated by the popular vote. It seems to he a sort of inwritten law that each person elected President who makes a satisfactory Administration shall have an opportunity to get the popular each subject of the popular endorsoment if the populace are with him. If he fails, he is not expected to have another nomination. You, or some of your readers, may remember a case that does not occur to me at present: but I do not remember one where the same person has been nominated by ofther of the great political parties to run three consecutive times for the office of President, whether successful or usuccessful in the second election. If this has been the Democratic usage, then the usage is unfavorable to the claims of ex-President Cleveland. He has been elected President and served one term. He has been nominated by the Democratic party for a second term, and, with all the machinery, patronage, and power of the Administration in his hands, he has been defeated for a second term. I say, according to usage, this seems to dispose of his claims. It may he the will of the Democratic Convention would be very hazasdous and unwise, so much so that neither of the great parties, but such an action on the part of the Domocratic Convention would be very hazasdous and unwise, so much so that neither of the great parties in the past has ever dared to venture upon the experiment.

"When Gen. Grant was serving out his second term with the prestige of his magnificent so that neither of the great parties in the past has ever dared to venture upon the experiment.

"When Gen. Grant was serving out his second term, with the prestige of his magnificent record as a Union General, and of having been twice elected President and never defeated by his party for anything, the Republican party, flushed with power and popular favor, did not even for the gratification of Gen. Grant and his host of enthusiastic Republican supporters, dare risk the experiment of attempting a third nomination, even in case of a candidate who had been successful in both of his previous races and who at that time was the most popular living American. Whether such an exception, if made by the Democrats, will be a wise one when the question is submitted to a popular vote is yet to be determined. I suppose it has been taken far granted by both parties in the past that it was not safess a party movement or was not good politics to try a man a second time if he had been once defeated while in office. Let me state what was the Democratic practice in a very noted case.

"In 1828 Gen. Andrew Jackson was nominated by the Democratic Convention and cleeted President of the United States, and John C. Callhoun, who had been Vice-President for the previous term under the Administration of the younger Adams, was elected Vice-President again on the ticket with Jackson. During the term Jackson and Calhoun differed and Jackson threw Calhoun overboard, if I may use the expression, and threw all of his patronage to Martin Van Buren, as Calhoun's successor as Vice-President. In 1832 the Democratic ticket was Jackson for President and Wan Buren for Vica-President, and the ticket was located by the Democratic candidate, and Richard M. Johnson was elected Vice-President, and Henry Harrison. Daniel Webster, and Hugh L. White were voted for in opposition to Van Buren, in 1849, true to usage, the Democratic Convention nominated van Buren for a second upon the slavery question, just as Grover Cleveland is now somewhat unpopular with som ment. When Gen. Grant was serving out his sec-they adopted the two-thirds rule, and under the two-thirds rule they took up James K. Polk, made him the nomines, and he was elected over Henry Clay, the great leader of the Whig party. Here was a case exactly in point. Van Buren was the bopular nomines in 1856 and was elected Democratic President. In 1840 the Democratic party, in conformity to usage, again made him its leader and nominated him for a second term. He was defeated, as Mr. Cleveland was in the last election. He and his friends, as is the case with McC Cleveland and his friends, were not content with the result and determined to do all they could to give him another chance be serve a second term. After mature reflection, however, it was thought by a majority of the perty that it was unwise to violate usage and make such a nomination, and he was disposed of by the two-thirds rule, and James R. Polk was nominated in his place and elected.

"If Democratic precedent is to be considered, then this inevitably disposes of Mr. Cleveland for another term, and it would be more in conformity with the usage of the Democratic party to nominate Senator Hill or some other good man as the Democratic candidate. And let it be remembered that the Government of the United States is now 100 years old, and that the usage of both great political parties not to nominate the same man three successive times for President, whether elected the second time or not, has been uniform and without exception. When we take into consideration the long and valuable services of Senator Hill as Governor of New York to the Democratic majority in the Legislature of New York and redeemed the State from the rule of the Bepublican party, and has placed it within the control of the Democratic party for many years to come, it would seem that no other Democratic majority in the Legislature of New York and redeemed the State from the rule of the Republican party, and has placed it within the control of the Democratic party for many years to come, it would seem that no other Democratic mountains, pass again under the control of the bottom cratic party.

"Let us hope that no unwise step will be taken, no unfortunate division tolerated, but that every Democrat will be ready to make any and all sacrifices which are necessary for the success of his party and to defend the great public interest involved. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

"Joseph E. Brown."

He stayed in South America about a year and a half, travelling about in the country, most of the time on mules. When he returned, which was somewhat over a year ago, he appeared to be thoroughly cured. After he had been in South Carolina for a short time, he said, he had slept like a top. It is possible, however, that his insomnia returned to him again recently, although he said nothing of it. It is possible that he had some more serious nervous or brain trouble in connection with his insomnia, and for that reason I have been anxious to find the specialist whom he consulted. But Dr. Sands is dead, and the only two other people who knew who the specialist was are both dead also, and I have been unable to learn the specialist's name. Very often doctors know more than they choose to say.

"My brother had no large amount of money with him, perhaps $100, but no more. I have examined all his checks at the bank and there were none there for auything but his usual everyday expenses. Any checks that have been presented at the bank since his disappearance I have had sent to me, but there have been none drawn since he went away.

"Of course, when a young man disappears suddenly it is always suggested that there may be an entanglement somewhere. I was quite sure in his case that there was nothing of this kind, but I have sifted this possibility along with all others that may have suggested thomselves, and I have been unable to find the slightest trace of anything of the sort. There is absolutely no explanation, except that his mind suddenly became unbalanced and he has gone off under some delusion. We have learned of a number of cases where this has happened and the people affected have completely concealed themselves under an assumed identity. We feel sure that it is only a matter of time before my brother will be found."

A SILLY GIRL'S ADVENTURE.

Masquerading as a Boy While the Whole Country Was Looking for Her. London, Feb. 13.—Miss Kate Evanson, the dventurous girl of Reading, who disappeared on Wednesday last while on her way to school at Bristol, has been found. The police were watching for her all over the west of England. and following false clues. It was left for her own brother to trace his wayward sister to Shrewsbury, where he discovered her at at inn in male attire. She was willing enough to accompany him home, and was restored to the arms of her parents.

The escapade was the freak of a romantic girl, who suddenly conceived the idea of putting into offect her long-cherished dream of seeing the world. She left the train at Gloucester, went to a clothing store, and bought the suit of man's clothes on the plea that she intended to give it to a poor person who had appealed to her for charity. She then went to a barber and induced the man to cut off her hair on the pretence that she suffered from headaches. She later took the train to Mitcheldean, and while in the compartment of a frest-class coach effected a change of clothing, leaving her suit of woman's appared on the reat. At Mitcheldean she alignited looking like a bright young boy. From that time she had a series of amusing adventures, managing to deceive everybody and clude pursuit, although the whole country was aroused and searching for her. in male attire. DISMAY OF BROOKLYN MUGWUMPS. How Was It That Less Than 400 Could Be Got Together Friday Night?

The little band of Mugwumps in Brooklyn. who have been in a state of mind over the snap Convention, had not recovered yesterday from the chilling effects of their feeble demonstration at the Criterion Theatre on Friday night. The committeemen, who have been proclaiming from day to day that the masses of the Demoeratic voters were in revolt against the ma-chine have been dumfounded by their failure chine have been dumfounded by their failure to bring only between 300 and 400 of the malcontents together, and are now engaged in the very unprofitable task of fixing the responsibility for the empty henches in the Criterion.

Not only are the Cleveland admirers angry at the public in general for not responding to their clarion call, but they have a fight of their own on their hands. Committeeman Sidney V. Lowell regards himself as a much abused man. It was mainly through his efforts that signatures to the protest were drummed up and other laborious machine work accomplished, but when it came to his turn to apeak at the Criterion, he was quietly turned down and a less influential but more pretentious committeeman took his place on the platform. Mr. Lowell said yesterday that he was greatly disgusted over the treatment he had received, and that vanity and jealousy were at the bottom of the whole business. Like a good soldier, however, he would go along collecting signatures to the Mugwump protests.

The Democracy of Hings county will mean-along collecting signatures to the Mugwump protests.

The Democracy of Kings county will meanwhile go straight along in its triumphant course undisturbed by the little breeze which Messrs. Edward M. Shephard & Co. have been trying to raise. The primary elections will be held to-morrow night, the Assembly Conventions will meet on Friday, and elect thirty-six delegates to the State Convention, each man of them in favor of David B, Hill.

Mr. Huber of the Palace Museum has a very strong list of attractions this week. Frank Cotton, the clown, who has appeared at this house several times in past seasons, will be seen again, with three trained donkeys, which have been taught to perform all manner of tricks. The ossifled man will also be seen this week and the Fenz brothers. Vienna duettists, will sing at this house for the first time this season. On the stage Prof. Mellin, in the black art; Pearlie May, Charles Duncan, and several others will be seen and heard. Altogether, the bill at the Palace this week is as strong as has been offered at any time in the history of the house.

bill at the l'alace this week is as strong as has been offered at any time in the history of the house.

Manager John B. Doris retains, and justifiably, too. his popular star, Fanny Herring, as the resistance attraction at his well-conducted museum in Eighth avenue. This week Miss Harring will be on view six or seven times daily as Lendormic, the idiot boy ranger, in the fire scene sensational drama, "The Scarlet Captain." Alternating with Miss Herring's troupe there will be variety shows by two separate companies, containing twenty performers of good repuite. In the curio halls this week are James Morris, the clastic skin man; the Pavinalli, or Parislan musical streat pavers; C. H. Wreck, the tall man: Prince Mungo, who delights to dance barefooted on tacks; Aina Don Janata, snake handler; E. S. Willis, tattooed man; a big collection of wax figures. &c. Doris's is enjoying a fine share of prosperity since the resumption of the theatrical entertainments.

The return to Worth's Museum to-morrow of Lalco, the freak, will doubtless crowd that interesting resort throughout the day and night. Ida Morello, with a troupe of trained dogs; Goodman, the magician: Stephen Stephens, Punch and Judy operator, and Worth's lectures on his remarkable collection of curios from all over the world are other features of the wonder halls. On the stage the usual brisk variety performances are supplied at frequent intervals by Dolle E. Howe, character singer; Campbell and Larkin, Irish comedians; Joseph Mazziatta, musical soloist; the Baldwins, black and white face wits, and Harry Thompson, Dutch dialect comedian.

At the Brooklyn Theatres.

The new Columbia Theatre in Brooklyn will be opened in two weeks by A. M. Palmer's company. Sarah Bernhardt, the Lyceum Company, Francis Wilson, E. H. Sothern, and "The Lost Paradise" are to follow. The new house is a very handsome structure, and it can hardly fail to become a fashionable Brooklyn resort.

J. K. Emmet will spend the week at the Lee Avenue Academy, playing his father's part in "Fritz in Ireland." The merits of the performance by this young heir of a favorite comedian have been discussed thoroughly. If he does not duplicate the original Friz in all respects, he gives a close and amusing imitation. His audiences have been disposed to acceut him without much hesitation. The play is given in a better manner, as to both cast and scenery, than ever it was by the senior Emmet. At Holmes's Star Theatre the play of the week will be "The World Against Her," with Agnes Wallace Villa in the principal role. The drama is both emotional and humorous, and for several seasons it has been a popular acceptance on the circuits. The star enjoys a great deal of popularity in the West, and no doubt she will introduce herself to Brooklyn in a manner to win a welcome. She promises that her company will prove to be capable and suitable. ance by this young heir of a favorite comedian

WORRY AND SPIRITUALISM AFFECT HER REASON.

She Receives Spirit Messages Through Handkerchief Pushloned to Resemble a Telephone Holder - People who Have Been Ruined by Her Pamous Littgation.

Ban Francisco, Feb. 13,-Sarah Althea Terry. who gained such notoriety by her divorce suit against ex-Senator Sharon and her subsequent marriage with Judge Terry, has become insane over spiritualism. She has been very eccentric ever since Terry was shot down by Policeman Neagle at the Lathrop eating station the moment after he slapped Justice Field's face. The fact that the court held Neagle blameless drove her nearly insane, and this feeling was aggravated by troubles which she had with her attorney in Fresno. She asserted that this attornoy made love to her, and she produced several amatory letters he had written. This enraged him and when she called at his office to get her law papers he brutally ejected her. To the disgrace of the Fresno courts they held that his action was justifiable.

Mra Terry, about three months ago, came to this city and bought some articles at dry goods stores. She asserted a few days later that her trunk had been robbed in the lodging house where she had hired a room, and she enumerated silks and satins worth $7,000 that had disappeared. Her case was thrown out of court, and she wasn't heard from again until last Thursday, when she came here from Stockton. She was placed by a friend in the house of Editor Culbreth of the City Argus, and a nurso was hired to care for her as she seemed laboring under tromendous excitement. She has now been two days in her room, attended by Dr. Gilmore. The Doctor says it's a clear case of dementia due to worry over her affairs and dabbling in spir-itualism. She sits for hours in one place with her pocket handkerchief rolled up and placed to her ear like the holder of a telephone. She says she gots all kinds of messages through this handkerchief from her friends in spirit and, and she handed the handkerchief to a reporter who saw her and asked him if he didn't hear whispers coming through it.

She looks very old and haggard, and her face is flushed with fever. Her pulse runs high, but she seems insensible to heat or cold. At night she becomes very violent and calls loudly for Judge Terry and for Porter calls loudly for Judge Terry and for Porter Ashe, whom she says she loves dearly. Ashe is a young fellow, whose father was a bosom friend of Terry in early days, and he was arrested and confined by the Vigilance Committee for opposing them.
Porter Ashe married Amy Crocker, but she secured a divorce after much scandal.
He is well known on the turf as the owner of Geraldine and other fast horses. He befriended Mrs. Terry after the shocting of her husband, and is about the only one of Terry's old friends who has been able to endure her caprices.

friended Mrs. Terry after the shooting of her husband, and is about the only one of Terry's old friends who has been able to endure her caprices.

She also calls for Morgan Hill, her brother, who lives at San Mateo. Her uncle, who is in the city, refuses to make application to have her committed to the asplum. As ret she has shown no tendency to dangerous violence, but the doctor fears her mania will increase. Last night she escaped for a moment from the nurse and was found promenating the front to and with no covering except a long sealson, cloak. Investigation has shown that during her last visit to this city she haunted the rooms of several spiritualist mediums, and spent there all the money she had trying to get light on her law case and advice from the spirit of Julige Terry.

The poor woman is a physical and mental wreck, although she is not over 40 years old. She has only a remnant of property left, Judge Terry's estate having been heavily mortgaged and badly managed. When the Sharon divorce suit began in March. 1884, she was a remarkably handsome woman, and since then she has been almost constantly before the public. She never got a cent from the Sharon estate, and about six months ago the last of her appeals was denied by the Federal Court. Nearly every one who played a conspicuous part in this famous case is dead or broken in fortune due directly to some outgrowth of the case. Sharon died years before his time owing to worry over the case. Gen. Barnes, Sharon s leading counsel, lost a fine bractice because of his devotion to the suit, and his mismanagement of the sist, and his mismanagemen has led to the conjecture that she was the last to use the instrument.

This theory is supported by a note which, it is said, was found in the room written in Mrs. Pardue's hand and signed by her, in which she said that she and her husband had no friends, and as he had concluded to commit suicide she would take her own life rather than live without him.

Mrs. Pardue's maiden name was Stophens. The couple had been married only a year. They appeared to live happily and no cause can be divined for the meinacholia that seems to have led them to so desperate a determination unless it was financial troubles. An inquest was held and the bodies will be buried to-morrow near the scene of the double tragedy.

YOUNG MRS. BLAINE HAPPY. She Expects to Get Her Divorce in a Few Days-Going to Dendwood.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 13.-Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., is a happy woman to-night, for she has the assurance that she will get her decree of divorce on res. A days later. Judge Thomas, a few days ago at Deadwood, issued an order to young at Deadwood, issued an order to young their decree of divorce on Feb. 17 or a few Blaine's attorneys to show cause why their answer should not be stricken out and why the case should not come to an immediate trial. The order recited the fact that the detrial. The order recited the fact that the defendent was in contempt of court, having disoboyed every order issued by it.

Judge Carland, attorney for Blaine, this afternoon said that he would not go to Deadwood to answer the order, and that no one representing Blaine would be there. The order is returnable on the 10th, but has been postponed one day. On the 17th, therefore, the defendant's answer will be stricken out, and the decree soon after will be granted.

Blaine has never paid any alimony, and it would now take $1.200 to have a standing in court. His attorney says that young Blaine has never been disposed to make such a fight as would hinder Mrs. Blaine from getting her decree. Mrs. Blaine, her attorney, and her sister, Miss Nevins, will leave on Monday for Deadwood.

FULLER RELEASED AT LAST. The Murder of William H, Dunham Likely

George W. Fuller, who was arrested on Jan. 13 on suspicion of killing William H. Danheni, the proprietor of the Belleville Hotel, and has since been held in the witness room of the Newark Polico Headquarters, was released yesterday. When he was arrested it was said there was evidence enough to hang him, but his captors were so mysterious about the mat ter that nothing could be learned which gave the public a chance to judge of the merits of the matter. Within two days of the arrest Superintendent Brown and Detective Cosgrova were ridiculed for their pains. Other members of the Police Department laughed quietly and shrugged their shoulders when Fuller was arrested, white the Prosecutor's detectives said that Fuller was not the culprit, and that they had proved it to their arrest. This seems to have reacted upon Faller, who has been uselessly held for a month, but he seems to be the kind of a man who thrives in confinement and rather likes bars at his win dows. He is an easygoing fedow, and was satisfied so long as he was well fed, well supplied with cigars, and had a fairly good held a sleep on. Occasionally he god exercise, and sleep on twice divertisement at a theatre in company with a detective.

In discharging him yesterday Superintedent Brown said that he had been held a week longer than he intended to hold him because Puller's family had requested his detention until they could have the case thoroughly investigated by the Fuller Detectivagency of this city. Superintendent Faller of the accepts was present yesterday when the prisoner was discharged. He said that he had been over the whole case, and was thoroughly satisfied that the young man was entirely innocent.

Superintendent Brown let himself down This seems to have reacted upon Fuller, who satisfied that the young man was entirely innocent.

Superintendent Brown let himself down easily by saying that Fuller had never really been a prisoner, but was held as a witness in the hope that his detention might bring some of his intimate friends forward to throw light on some points of the crime.

Fuller indignantly denied last night that be had willingly been a stool pigeon for the Newark police in any sense of the word. He said he was willing to undergo imprisonment for a year if at the end of that time he could go out into the world free from any trace of suspicion.
